

Feet of Clay, Throne of Grace

Album 40

F Album 40 Stories

Song 1: Feet of Clay, Throne of Grace The Roman and later Byzantine Empires had strong iron-like power but weak foundations (feet of iron mixed with clay). Great rulers like Justinian tried to hold everything together, but the empire slowly broke apart. Only Jesus Christ sits on the true Throne of Grace that never falls.

Song 2: Rome's Legs Broke In 476 AD, the Western Roman Empire finally ended when Odoacer defeated the last emperor. The Eastern (Byzantine) part lasted longer but also faced many struggles. This fulfilled Daniel's prophecy that the iron-clay kingdom would not stay united.

Song 3: Dragon Vettai (Dragon Hunt) In 1453, the Ottoman Turks conquered Constantinople. The great Christian city fell after a long siege. The song calls this the “Dragon” taking the city, but reminds us that Jesus is greater than any earthly conqueror.

Throne of Grace.

Song 4: L'éclipse du Dragon The fall of Constantinople in 1453 was like a dark blood moon eclipse. The city that had stood for over 1,000 years as a Christian capital was taken. Yet even in darkness, Jesus Christ remains the eternal Light and King.

Song 5: Eisen und Ton This song (in German style) tells how the Roman-Byzantine empires were like iron mixed with clay — strong but fragile. They rose high but eventually fell, just as Daniel prophesied long ago.

Song 6: Dragon Prophecy It tells the prophecy and historical event of the Ottoman conquest of Constantinople. The “Dragon” (Ottoman power) took the city in 1453, but the song looks forward to Jesus Christ's final victory over all evil powers.

Foot of Clay, Throne of Grace.

Song 7: Cumhuriyetin Matrisi After the Ottoman Empire ended, Turkey became a modern Republic under Mustafa Kemal Atatürk. Old systems changed dramatically. The song reminds us that all human systems and empires are temporary — only God's Kingdom is eternal.

Feet of Clay, Throne of Grace

Album 40

